

6 RULES TO AVOID FALSE ACCUSATIONS

1 Avoid partners you do not know well

Character is difficult to assess initially. If you don't know who they are, you can't predict what they'll do.

2 Avoid ambiguous encounters

Even if consent is present, your partner may not see it that way later—especially if they no longer want to.

3 Avoid intoxicated or high partners

Not all intoxication is incapacitation, but false accusers often exaggerate their level of intoxication.

4 Avoid mentally unstable or toxic partners

Attention-seeking, vindictiveness, victim mentality, BPD, and narcissism are common in false accusers.

5 Avoid partners with existing relationships

False accusations are sometimes made to cover up cheating on a partner.

6 Treat your partners with respect

Don't give them a motive to regret and then vindictively misrepresent the encounter.

These strategies are based on real stories of college students who have been falsely accused. Following this advice will not prevent every false accusation, but it will prevent most of them. Learn more about avoiding or defending against false accusations at titleixforall.com.
